WABEINGTON, Feb. 13, 1846 The rumor in circulation here for some days past hat a treaty was about to be sent into the Senate. having for its base the 49th parallel, with several reciprocal commercial privileges, appertaining to the various rivers and iniets north and south of that latitude, may have arisen from the fact that such an idea has been thought of before in high places.

to the world.

Whether such a thing may ever happen or not, it must be evident to the sagacious and far-seeing eye of Mr. Pakenham, that if the present session of Congress be permitted to run out without arranging the question in dispute upon a platform of this sort, the people of the United States will then take it out of both his and Mr. Polk's hands, and dispose of it in whatever manner they think best. England may threaten, through the columns of the London Times. He "rabble route" of this country with war; but of what value would such threats be, when made against those who are more ready to make war upon England inced there to war to a vote upon the lines 54 40 and 48, four fifths of the people would decide in layor of the first, and indignantly reject the last. The danger to the smcable and speedy settlement of the question, therefore, lies in delay and not in diplomacy; for, whenever the people see clearly into any subject that becomes an apple of discord with ministers plenipotentiary and politicians, they very soon decide it for themselves, and unravel the gordian knots with which court forms and machiavelian subtlety may have entangled it. The British Minister has been sufficiently long a resident of this country, to have learned all that I here assert; and being a gentleman of good judgment, will not gainsay what I have advanced. The trult us, sir, the prople of the United States care very little for the leading politicians at Washington, and respect their acts only in proportion as the country of the states Pit and Gallery 12% ceuts.
